Hey @MarkSaidEsq as the attorney of multiple Havana Syndrome victim from 60 Minutes, you should know the Guerrilla Skeptics group of Wikipedia editors hijacked the @Wikipedia page to debunk the subject.

@Rob_Palmer of the group is the #1 editor of the page.

Demand Wikipedia to Dismiss Editors Suppressing UAP Phenomenon Information

Started

February 6, 2020

Why this petition matters

Started by Bea Andone

We call on Wikipedia.org to take immediate action against content editors who have knowingly distorted or eradicated information related to the Undocumented Aerial Phenomena (UAP) phenomenon and its associated individuals. These editors, known as the 'Guerilla Skeptics', are perpetuating a discredited Cold War policy of denial and ridicule, which is fundamentally at odds with Wikipedia's mission of providing free access to the sum of all human knowledge. The implicated editors include LuckyLouise, Skeptic, RP2006, jojo Antirax, Jihaxx, Hob Gadling, Hemiauchenia, and Jusdrafax. Their actions not only undermine the credibility of this globally recognized platform but also suppress truth-seeking efforts in an area gaining increasing attention from scientists and governments alike. A report by The New York Times in 2020 about US government's interest in UAPs shows that such phenomena deserve serious examination rather than dismissal or distortion. We urge Wikipedia.org to uphold its commitment towards unbiased dissemination of knowledge by removing these editors immediately. Sign this

There needs to be a class action defamation lawsuit to bring down this group and hold them to account to the full extent of the law. Defamation is a serious crime which can incur serious financial consequences.

Ok, Susan has got to stop her wiki followers from keeping accurate birthday dates a. S

locations incorrectly stated on various target pages. The first two to rectify are journalist George Knapp (Pulitzer and Edward R. Murrow awardee) and retired soldier Lou Elizondo. I believe a firm statement to her legions would go a long way toward allowing the corrections be made downstream. Thanks, could you explain how this article is something you would site on David Gursch's wiki?

It seems it makes a connection to bigelow and david from the fact they are both in the government?

Thats a connection, but not a discredit I am not sure that would disqualify the 2004 video evidence do you think you could explain how those UAPs can do a 90 degree turn without slowing?

They must be a break away civ at least because that req gives the ability to manipulate gravity or inertia.

When you add an article like that that just make claims when there is video evidence, its seems you are bias?

NIDS was studying Skinwalker ranch, which was scientist studying what was going on at the Ranch, and had been for years

Colm Kelleher a scientist in NIDS on the study wrote a book I would like to discuss that with you and get your insight, as you must know more than wiki?

It seems a little like the Dunning-Kruger effect where the least knowledgeable are the most confident in their views

Wikipedia Cabal / Afterlife Guardians

Hosted by George Knapp

Guests: Rob Heatherly, Ali Duncan, Stafford Betty

Sunday - February 25, 2024

About the show

First Half: A cabal of hardcore skeptics and UFO debunkers has surreptitiously seized control of Wikipedia, including the online biographies of many of the most prominent UFO figures and investigators, including Carl Sagan, Robert Bigelow, Bob Lazar, and Coast to Coast's own George Knapp. The editors' slanted viewpoints and dismissive opinions, and they block any attempts by others to correct blatant facts; rigorously exclude any information which is supportive of the targeted individuals or the UFO subculture; and exert control of other Wikipedia topics and pages viewed by tens of millions of readers. How did this happen? A former US marine who runs the Military Witness to UAP YouTube channel, has discovered some of the cabal. He joins George Knapp to discuss what he's uncovered, along with Ali Duncan, who was trying to correct errors on George's wiki page. The guests will reveal specific abuses of the Wikipedia to be trusted as an information source.

Unfortunately I'm not an expert in wikipedia's rules. But if it's true that you do break the rules then it appears my pathway is not toward your group but to amending rules that allow bad faith actors to post misleading info. Thank you for pointing me in the right direction.

It says this was done on January 8th 2024, so 10 days ago. I'm not sure if Coulthart has addressed this yet.

Can someone shed some light on why someone would do this on wikipedia and remove basic facts about him like him being a practicing lawyer for a while?

Reedit: Apparently JFC Twitter is all over it, seems like some tuckery going on. And not just about Coulthart, Elizondo and others too.

Some rogue group of Wikipedia editors calling themselves "Guerrilla Skeptics", (organized effort to discredit those pushing for disclosure) apparently endorsed by Mick West too.

Why the fuck would anyone who is skeptical be against "disclosure"? The entire point of being skeptical is to attempt to find the truth, not to censor anything you don't like or agree with. If there is no truth around the NHI hypothesis than we can let it be discovered through investigation and application of the scientific method, not through manipulation, censoring, and slander.

suspect it is GSoW up to their normal tricks

The biggest surprise to me is how few people know about GSoW in this sub. Wikipedia is a terrible resource for any topics that the skeptics feel threatened by, the articles become negative junk and in some cases just attack pieces.

As a past skeptic that was involved on the fringes of the skeptic community, I became appalled by how dishonest and sleazy they were. Then they would justify it by accusing others of doing what they were actually doing.

It still makes me laugh that the skeptic community adopted the exact same ugly tactics as Scientologists are known for.

Luis Elizondo

This was one of the few pages I've written from scratch. I tend to like to "rescue" pages and leave the new pages creations to other editors. I follow the work of Mick West and the whole JFO/UAP and the U.S. Congress story is super interesting. kept coming across the name of Luis (or Luis) Elizondo connected to the story. I went to Wikipedia to find out more information and was surprised to see that there wasn't a Wikipedia page. He was all over the main stream media, so I couldn't understand why not. I should have dug a little further but just got started. It took me about ten hours straight to get the page written, let the GSoW team review it and then on May 26, 2021, published it on Wikipedia.

All the efforts were statements to the like "this is not a topic we're going to discuss".
I think it's time to do something about this. I am not going to do it myself, but I think others will be better suited to do it.
So I would like to see a formal statement of position from the Wikipedia:Administrators' Association that they will support this change and not oppose it.
It may not be enough to get a formal response, but will be having such a response.

I'm not Wikimedia - I'm just a Wikipedia editor who made an account. I believe in VFO and I'm not Grusich.

I want to validate what he v-deo said up to a point. Yes there are some asshole skeptics in there but a lot of UFO believers too.

The edits I saw on the show weren't actually that problematic. We always remove academic degrees from talk at ANY page. We always remove random podcast appearances. Awards weren't removed from the Awards section. Talk pages aren't "secret" they're very very public. Talk page archives aren't secret. I can say in the video that Elizondo was born in Texas but went and checked and couldn't find any reliable sources. The wiki article cites a news source that says he was born in Miami. Can you find a "reliable source" that says he was born in Texas? Edit: No - can't just call him up and ask him where he was born. I'm just an amateur editor, not an investigative reporter. Nobody's going to take my word for anything. We could end up in court over this. That would probably work.

Just remember the skeptics don't run the show on Wikipedia. If you look at how the sausage gets made, look at the ENTIRE process. We use some asshole skeptics in the process, but we use a lot of others of different biases.

Disclosure is NOT a battle that will be fought on Wikipedia - it's a battle that will be fought in the press, Times and the Washington Post. There's like four to ten hardcore skeptics on Wikipedia and they cross the line into blatantly wrong edits. The second disclosure happens in mainstream sources and can't be overruled.

Sources need to be reliably published. We never use anyone's knowledge etc as a source.

I agree completely banning the organization would be unhelpful to the project, but without resolving 2, 3 and 4 strongly believe the ability of non-GSoW editors to appropriately engage in ways to resolve the concerns within the topic is hampered. Experienced Wikipedia editors are discouraged from joining Guerrilla Skepticism on Wikipedia because "they do not fit in well."

Or maybe GSoW doesn't want editors with established credibility finding out what they're really up to and holding them accountable.

I'm an experienced Wikipedia editor can I join GSoW and skip the training? No. We have found that experienced editors have a very different experience at a meet than ours. With very few exceptions we have found that they do not fit in well. We are not "just" editors. We have a different mind set and focus than a normal editor. We are much more social, use Facebook to discuss, train and motivate. We follow all the rules of Wikipedia, and love normal Wikipedia editors, but we approach things as a team. If you would still like to join us, please do so, but you will not be skipping lessons we still have to proceed through training like someone who has never eaten before. (Back to op)

KLAUS @tinyklaus · 1d
Sounds like Guerilla Skepticism on Wikipedia are well aware that what they're doing could be problematic for their members' reputations down the line.

Pretty wild.

You should also know that there are rules that govern Wikipedia. GSoW follows those rules, we must be really careful as many of us are very public and we don't want something to come back and haunt us years later. So, we must be extra careful of the rules.
